"Less filling, tastes great" : the realist-neoliberal debate

The concept of anti-realism in logic seems to be an interesting and growing idea. I'm looking for references (papers, books, authors...) regarding the debate between realism and anti-realism but especially related to logic and mostly on the anti-realism side but the defense of realism or the criticism of anti-realism are, indeed, accepted.

In the history of international relations, no single idea has been more influential than the notion that there was a 'great debate' in the 1920s and 1930s between the advocates of idealism and the champions of realism. In reality, there was never a single 'great debate' but rather a multiplicity of discussions which revolved around at least three big questions: does capitalism lead to war ...

This chapter provides a comprehensive survey of concepts and issues concerning the realism debate. It explains that realism comes in two basic varieties: realism about things and realism about truth. Truth comes in different kinds, but the least committal, philosophy neutral kind is the so-called minimal truth. The demands on minimal truth are platitudinous, ore requirements of bare material ...

Realism Debate - Oxford Scholarship

The dispute between scientific realism and anti-realism is one of the most exciting topics in the current general philosophy of science. In the debate, the anti-realists attack their opponents with two main arguments, the pessimistic induction and the underdetermination of theories by all possible data.
